“Peoples of the Plateau Culture Area”

Dr. David R. Miller, Emeritus Professor, Indigenous Studies, University of Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada

The environment of the Plateau in the northwestern United States and contiguous parts of Canada was an extreme and demanding one for human adaptation. In order to examine the relationships between people in the region and the responses necessary for their survival, this presentation surveys the experiences of several exemplary groups: the Tsilhqotin and the Sanpoil/Nespelam.

This lecture is presented for Anthropology E-320, “Indians of North America” Professor Douglas R. Parks, Instructor

All members of the Indiana University Community, as well as the general public, are invited to attend all of the lectures in the series

Indiana University Sponsors

Department of Anthropology
American Indian Studies Research Institute
William H. Mathers Museum of World Cultures
First Nations Education and Cultural Center