RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

- Aug 2005-
Present Assistant/Associate/Full Professor – Indiana University, Department of Psychological and Brain Sciences
Studying the causes and treatment of child and adolescent psychopathology through genetically informative, longitudinal, and intervention studies.
(<http://www.indiana.edu/~devpsych/>)
- Aug 1999 -
2005 Graduate Student - Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program
Utilizing extended twin-family designs to resolve the genetic and environmental processes underlying parent-child relationships, especially focusing on association between parenting practices, family conflict, divorce, and child adjustment. Also utilizing behavior genetic studies of children to explore how the environment controls genetic expression of intellectual ability. Assisting in the evaluation of a group-therapy treatment for court-ordered, divorced parents who are experiencing high conflict and difficulties with their children.

Advisors: Eric Turkheimer, Ph.D. (Chair), Lindon Eaves, Ph.D., Robert Emery, Ph.D., E. Mavis Hetherington, Ph.D., and Steven Nock, Ph.D.

June 2003 Student - APA Advanced Training Institute in Longitudinal Methods, Modeling, and Measurement in Psychological Research

Participated in week-long course which explored the history of longitudinal research and provided training in modeling growth and change, intra-individual variability, multivariate and categorical outcomes, and item responses.
Main Instructor: Jack McArdle, Ph.D.

July 1997 – May 1999 Research Specialist - Behavior Genetics & Adolescent Psychopathology

Initially, helped design a developmental behavior genetics study of adolescent adjustment and psychiatric problems. Conducted structured interviews with children and helped write proposals to the NIH. Wrote a data-analysis proposal which was funded by a private foundation which supported my salary and allowed me to analyze data collected on adolescent twins and their mothers. Utilized structural equation models to analyze twin data and prepared manuscripts and presentations for conferences. Through graduate classes and individual mentoring, was trained in multivariate statistics, psychiatric epidemiology, behavior genetic research methods, and quantitative genetics.
Advisors: Lindon Eaves, Ph.D, Judy Silberg, Ph.D., and Lenn Murrelle, Ph.D.

July 1996 - June 1997 Distinguished Majors Student - Child and Adolescent Resiliency

Wrote a research proposal and a grant to support a study on the influence of individual, family, and community protective factors for children and adolescence in a high-risk urban area. Selected measures for assessing the children, parents, and teachers in a school in downtown Pittsburgh, PA. Collected data, analyzed it, and prepared a distinguished majors thesis.
Advisors: E. Mavis Hetherington, Ph.D. and Steven Nock, Ph.D.
