

Regionalization and Retrenchment: The Impact of European Integration on the Welfare State

by Jason Beckfield
Assistant Professor, Department of Sociology
Harvard University

Jason Beckfield is Assistant Professor of Sociology at Harvard University. His current work focuses on the consequences of European integration for economic inequality among and within the nation-states of Western Europe, and the impact of European integration on national welfare policy and differences among welfare states. At Harvard, he teaches courses on Social Stratification and Globalization, co-organizes the Harvard-MIT Economic Sociology Seminar, and co-chairs the Study Group on Exclusion and Inclusion in an Expanded Europe at the Center for European Studies.

Thursday, February 21, 2008
4:00 pm
Georgian Room, IMU

Co-sponsored by the European Union Center of Excellence, West European Studies, and the Department of Sociology.