Arkhalig with undershirt and

Description:

cream-colored jacket with black pants Azeri (small), black & gold blouse. The single breasted Arkhalig is fastened with button hooks over the black undershirt. The long fabric of the Arkhalig hangs down over the thighs, creating a striking figure. Gold brocade was often used as decoration on both men's and women's clothing. Historically, fabrics of the Arkhalig distinguished social position of the wearer; however, this outfit is now only worn during special occasions and festivals, typically in rural areas of Azerbaijan.

Kamzol

red woman's vest, with gold trim and clasp. The red color indicates this Kamzol would typically be worn by a younger woman, though it is longer than what is usually worn by girls. The material and color are clearly Kazakh; however, there is evidence of Uyghur influence found in the depiction of birds and flowers in the embroidery. The Kamzol is typically worn over a long dress, or Koinok.

Dark blue with black trim and red backing. Heavily embroidered with beads of yellow, white, green, orange, red, and brown. This hat recently came to our collection courtesy of a Kazakh scholar. It is beautifully made with intricate beadwork. While most Kazakh textiles are of a simpler pattern, it is possible this hat was created with Tajik influences, where such beadwork is common.

women's vest w/ tassels: black w/ purple, blue, orange, cream and green embroidery. The geometric shapes and blend of purple, blue, orange, cream, and green emroidery on this Kamzol are distinctly Kyrgyz. This vest is most likely worn by a more senior member of the family, given its short length, dark color, and modest covering. Kamzols with a shaped waist are relatively new, introduced only in the late 19th and 20th centuries.

Description:

maroon vest and skirt with gold trim in two threads, bull's horns pattern. The burgandy color indicates this outfit would typically be worn by an older woman. The Kamzol, or vest, is typically worn over a long dress. The Beldemchi, or skirt, is worn by married women after the birth of their first child, especially in the winter. Under the long dress, trousers are often worn.

"The middle ages women & men wore summer hats made of plush wet velvet upturned brim & brocaded pointed tops. The hat was crowed with a fanciful knot. In ancient times it symbolized power capable of frightening enemies"
(www.discovermongolia.mn)
The upturned velvet along the rim of the hat is very common amongst Mongolian hats. The knot at the top of the hat had special meaning in ancient times: it was meant to signify power to frighten one's enemies.

Burgandy rug with orange, black, and white design; two central designed surrounded by border of (flowers?) in alternating orange and red with white centers. The weaving of rugs for prayer, dowries, and sale in the market is common across all of Central Eurasia and the "Silk Road." Skilled weavers are highly prized and valued within the community. Despite similarities in production of yarn, dyes, and use of looms, rugs from different tribes and regions are very distinct. This example of a wool Turkmen rug displays the symmetry common to rug weaving, as well as the geometric patterning common among rugs from Central Asia and the Middle East.

Cyrillic Title

Dopi: black and white embroidered with teardrop design and bordered by cloverleaf and curled "Y"s. Men in many parts of Central Asia wear these hats every day. They fold up easily to fit in the back pocket. Embroidery on them often represents symbols of fertility, luck, and other spiritual factors. Uzbek national hat
