Burgandy rug with orange, black, and white design; two central designed surrounded by border of (flowers?) in alternating orange and red with white centers. The weaving of rugs for prayer, dowries, and sale in the market is common across all of Central Eurasia and the "Silk Road." Skilled weavers are highly prized and valued within the community. Despite similarities in production of yarn, dyes, and use of looms, rugs from different tribes and regions are very distinct. This example of a wool Turkmen rug displays the symmetry common to rug weaving, as well as the geometric patterning common among rugs from Central Asia and the Middle East.
